The Buffalo Flows (Video) The Buffalo Flows is a one-hour documentary film written and produced by two-time Emmy award winning filmmaker Larry Foley, Professor of Journalism at the University of Arkansas. The film is narrated by Academy Award winner Ray McKinnon, an actor and film director who calls Little Rock home. Trey Marley of Fayetteville does a masterful job of capturing the river's magnificent beauty over four seasons, while Emmy Award winning documentary filmmaker Dale Carpenter, also a professor at the U of A, lends his talent as the film's editor "This story is like the old song, 'Big Rock Candy Mountain.' There's not just one thing that makes the Buffalo so special—so unique," said Foley. "When the 'Battle for the Buffalo' was won, protecting the river from being dammed, we saved a national, natural treasure."	19.95

National Geographic Maps, Trails Illustrated, Buffalo National River These two maps, first published by Trails Illustrated in 1992-93, use USGS topographic maps as a base. T.I. has added hiking and horse trails, roads, campgrounds and other features not shown on the 1960s vintage USGS maps. Both maps show routes of access to river and wilderness, and floaters' car shuttle routes. Map users will find it easy to calculate the mileage of any trail hike or river trip. The West Half map has a list of day hikes graded by difficulty. Both maps contain text information for hikers, floaters, horseback riders, for anyone wanting to explore the Buffalo. Both maps are printed in four colors on waterproof, tear-proof plastic. Map design and text are by Ken Smith, author of Buffalo River Handbook and The Buffalo River Country, with cooperation from the National Park Service and U.S. Forest Service. Each map is 25 x 36½., folded to 4½ x 9¼, $11.95 Each. Buffalo National River, East Half Including the Leatherwood Wilderness and Lower Buffalo

The Battle for the Buffalo River: The Story of America's First National River, Second Printing, Neil Compton; With a New Foreword by Kenneth L. Smith Back in print and in paperback, how the Buffalo River became America's first national river. This book is the account of this decade-long struggle that drew in such political figures as U. S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, Senator J. William Fulbright, and Governor Orval Faubus. The battle finally ended in 1972 with President Richard Nixon's designation of the Buffalo as the first national river. Drawing on hundreds of personal letters, photographs, maps, newspaper articles, and reminiscences, Compton's lively book details the trials, gains, setbacks, and ultimate triumph in one of the first major skirmishes between environmentalists and developers. Neil Compton (1912-1999) was also the author of The High Ozarks: A Vision of Eden. He received the National Wildlife Federation's National Conservation Achievement Award and was a President George H. W. Bush Point of Light Recipient for his community service, and in 1990 President Bush presented Compton with the Teddy Roosevelt Conservation Award. 7 x 10, 496 pages, 90 photographs, 3 maps, index. Paper bound. ISBN 9781557289353	29.95
